Fishing at Picacho and on the Colorado River is great! You don't necessarily need a boat to land nice fish. Try the upper dock next to the fish cleaning station. Some beautiful channel catfish and stripers have been caught there. Nightcrawlers, cut bait, and chicken livers are all very reliable baits. Bass fishing is best from a boat or float tube on backwater lakes. Huge Flathead and Blue catfish have been caught off both Picacho docks! When fishing at night, be prepared to bring in a large fish.

CHANNEL CATFISH
(Ictalurus punctatus)

Channel catfish have a deeply forked tail. The "whiskers" are harmless, but the dorsal and pectoral fins are sharp and can inflict a painful poke. Channels will eat almost anything dead or alive. They bite year-round on stink bait, cut bait, and chicken livers. Fish along the banks with light tackle for a good fight. Channels reach up to 30 pounds in this area.

LARGEMOUTH BASS
(Micropterus salmoides)

Largemouth bass hide along weedy edges and cover waiting to attack their prey. These fish are caught on a variety of baits, both natural and artificial. In an effort to preserve these elusive fish, there is a minimum size of 13 inches and a limit of six fish per angler. The river record was set in 1996 and is 16 pounds 14 ounces!

FLATHEAD CATFISH
(Pseudoplatystoma olivacei)

Introduced to the lower Colorado River in 1962, these hard-fighting catfish have reached weights of over 100 pounds! The river record flathead was caught at Picacho in 1995. It weighed just over 64 pounds. These catfish, lay in deep holes ambushing prey. Fish with heavy rod and reel at night with live bait for flatheads. The firm, white meat is excellent eating.
