Earth Day Planting Event

Sites 130 – 144 San Elijo SB Campground

Reservations for April 20-24th, 2017

Earth Day 2017 provides an opportunity for all of us to do something meaningful for our planet by giving back to California State Parks and our communities. A hundred volunteers will be assisting with projects at San Elijo including habitat restoration, native garden conservation, and installing informational signage.

On Saturday, April 22nd our staff and volunteers will need to enter your campsite in order to restore the habitat along the fence line. We are hoping that native plants will flourish along the Highway 101 fence in order to block out noise and smog providing our visitors with a beautiful and peaceful camping experience. We encourage you to join us on this important occasion, to do your part by using your melted ice water from your coolers, your dripping wetsuit water and any other leftover fresh water you might have to water our growing native plants.

A successful Earth Day event will not be possible without the continued support of our park users and dedicated community volunteers, so we thank you! If you would like to participate in this year's event please register at www.calparks.org/earthday.

Thank you again,

San Elijo Park Staff
