This Weekend

Celebrate California Trail Days; Enjoy California's Natural Splendor

Governor Gray Davis has proclaimed this weekend, April 12 and 13, as California Trail Days to celebrate the Golden State's natural splendor long recognized through its trails, parks and recreation areas.

"Trail Days draw attention to the beautiful parks and recreation areas that are found throughout California, highlighting the need to protect and care for them," said Ruth Coleman, Acting State Parks Director.

California's trails are available to all citizens and visitors for nature hikes, and help promote an appreciation for our natural environment, alternative transportation, and individual health and wellness.

Trail Days also acknowledges the dedication and commitment of the many volunteers who give their time and resources to maintain trails through cleanup activities and necessary repairs.

This weekend marks California's 17th Annual California Trail Days.
