California State Parks Begins 150th Anniversary Year with New Year's Day Hikes

SACRAMENTO, CA.—This New Year's Day 2014, California State Parks will commemorate our 150th Anniversary with several First Day Hikes planned across the state. On Wednesday January 1, 2014, thirty-one (31) state parks will offer 38 different hikes, including hikes in the redwoods, the deserts and along the coast and beaches, as well as a paddle hike, and other activities.

The First Day Hikes coincide with State Parks sesquicentennial anniversary year, and they are a signature event designed to offer visitors the opportunity to connect to their parks and nature for recreation and to promote a healthy lifestyle. First Day Hikes are guided by State Parks staff and volunteers.

"This is an exciting time for State Parks, and we want to connect people to their parks, and make the First Day Hikes an annual family tradition for our visitors," said Major General Anthony L. Jackson, USMC (Ret.), Director of California State Parks. "State Parks belong to the people California. For 150 years, California State Parks has been a leader in the conservation and preservation of our natural and cultural resources, and our mission is to offer quality recreation opportunities for the whole family."

This is the third year California has participated in the First Day Hikes. Last year, there were over 700 hikes across the nation, with more than 22,000 visitors participating, a 6,000 increase over 2012. The following parks will be participating in First Day Hikes:

In 1864, in the midst of the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln signed legislation granting the Yosemite Valley and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove (known as the Yosemite Grant) to the state of California to be “held for public use, resort, and recreation, and shall be inalienable for all time”. In September of that year, California Governor Frederick Lowe accepted the grant and appointed the first State Parks Commission. Galen Clark, was appointed State Guardian of Yosemite in May 1866, at a salary of $500 per year, becoming the first State Parks employee. These actions represented not only the birth of California State Parks, but in essence, the birth of the national park idea, which has spread throughout the world.

Today, California State Parks has grown to be one of the largest state park systems in the world, with 280 park units, more than 1,600,000 acres, 14,000 campsites, and visitor attendance of some 70 million visitors per year.

California State Parks Mission

To provide for the health, inspiration and education of the people of California by helping to preserve the state's extraordinary biological diversity, protecting its most valued natural and cultural resources, and creating opportunities for high-quality outdoor recreation.
