

WILDER RANCH STATE PARK

WELCOME! The Santa Cruz coastline and California's ranch history awaits discovery on the 7,000 acres of Wilder Ranch State Park (SP). With more than 30 miles of trail, you can adventure into the Santa Cruz Mountains or walk along the coastal bluffs. From the crest of Ben Lomond Mountain, the landscape rolls down ancient wave-cut terraces through the marshes of a nature preserve to the seashore.

Step back in time and experience a California 19-century dairy ranch, including Victorian homes, barns, and a water-powered machine shop. Bring a picnic to enjoy on the front lawn, and visit the farm animals.

Hiking and Biking—Explore our 33 miles of trail through scenic coastlines, redwood forests, peaceful meadows, and oak woodlands. See map for trails or contact us for recommendations. THINGS TO DO

If you have an hour, picnic at the cultural preserve, explore the historic buildings, and say hello to the chickens and goats.

If you have half a day, hike the coastal bluffs along the Old Cove Landing trail and picnic at Fern Grotto Beach. It's a world of spectacular views and wildlife, including pelicans, harbor seals, sea otters, dolphins, and migrating whales.

If you have a full day, hike, bike, or ride your horse through the grassy wave-cut terraces north of Highway 1 to the lush Enchanted Loop and see some of the park's hidden coast redwoods.

Uypi Tribe

Wilder Ranch State Park lies within the unceded territory of the Uypi tribe who have stewarded this area since time immemorial. Colonial pressures severely impacted Indigenous peoples in this area and sought to remove them from their traditional lifeways and homelands. However, Native people persist in the region to this day and continue the legacy of Indigenous stewardship in honor of the Uypi.

Friends of Santa Cruz State Parks

Friends of Santa Cruz State Parks provides funds to support educational programs, visitor services, and capital projects at all parks in the greater Santa Cruz area. For more information, visit ThatsMyPark.org.
